DEDICATION

We, the Staff of 1933, respectfully dedicate this tenth volume of The Bluestocking
to

DR. LEWIS WILSON JARMAN

who, for four years our President, has worked with great success, both within and without the College, toward the advancement and betterment of Mary Baldwin.

"All the world's a stage,
And all the men and women merely players;
They have their exits and their entrances;
And one man in his time plays many parts."

Alma Mater

Thou wast born of dreams, Mary Baldwin, Mary Baldwin,
Woman's dreams of love and true desire.
Conqueror's dreams with passion's ardor glowing,
Caught from Truth's undying, pure white fire.
Born to live, to perish never,
To inspire to high endeavor,
To uphold that light forever,
Mary Baldwin!

Thou was built of dreams, Mary Baldwin, Mary Baldwin,
Dreams of faith, the dreams of early dawn.
Thou shalt live beyond time's farthest limit;
Dreams shall last when walls of stone are gone.
Born to live, to perish never,
To inspire to high endeavor,
To uphold that light forever,
Mary Baldwin!

Message From the Dean

Now, while your BLUESTOCKING is new, while it smells of the printery and the bindery and its pages are clean—very clean, I come to you as one whom you know and who knows you. Somewhere in the back of your mind there must be just a few scraps of the advice that has gone across my desk to you; in my own heart is the memory of many of your pleasantries and perplexities. With Ulysses I can say of you, in the words of Tennyson, "souls that have toiled and wrought and thought with me." So it is that Mary Baldwin has bound us together.

Some day, five years from now, or ten, or more, you will unearth this BLUESTOCKING as you hunt in some box stored with treasures precious only to you. With what a mixture of emotions you will turn through its pages. Perhaps you will stop for just a moment at this page and stopping you will remember that I have a message for you—not the you of 1933, but the you of the future. Deep in our hearts there linger those memories which bind us still together. Toward the solution of life's daily problems we are directing our knowledge, our experience, our idealism. Thus it is that college days are projected into the future.

Present or future, here affection dwells. Always and forever you are a Mary Baldwin girl, always and forever Mary Baldwin lives on in you, loves you, and desires the best for you. Across the years I reach my hand to greet you in the name of Mary Baldwin!

Affectionately yours,

ELIZABETH PFOHL.

THE
SENIOR CLASS

Senior Song

While mountains guard thee in the Shenandoah,
And loyal daughters daily look to thee,
The spool of happy days is fast unwinding
Its colors rare for mem'ry's tapestry.
The tall white columns gleaming in the sunlight
The moonlight casting over all its spell.
The scarlet autumn, and the winters snowflakes—
O, Mary Baldwin, can we say farewell!

May laughter ring and dreams be ever golden,
Along the terrace there above the street,
May friendships live like truth's white flame a-glowing
Like truth's white flame that never meets defeat.
Where'er we be, we'll cherish with fond happiness,
That golden tapestry of memories' spell,
And ever we our faith and love will pledge thee,
So, Mary Baldwin, hail and farewell.

Our Legacy

When twilight forms behind these columns tall,
Or sunlight slips through blowing leaves, to fall
In trembling, dappled shadows on the grass,
You wonder at its loveliness, and say,
"How beautiful it is." You do not know
That you are seeing more than grass, and trees,
And walks, and buildings resting here and there;
You doubtless think the mellowness and grace
That hover in the very atmosphere
Are due to times kind fingers, and the touch
Of gently weathering wind, and rain, and snow.
I like to think this air of quiet grace
A mist of all the memories and dreams
Of all the girls who here have sought, and found,
For nigh unto a hundred years, life's noblest truths.

In coming years our places will belong
To others: for we leave behind no ghosts
To haunt these shadowed walks at night, nor are
Our names inscribed where all who pass must see.
But we will leave our love, that it may join
The mist of other thoughts that linger here.
So when you see the terraces, so fair
In moonlight, or beneath the drifting snow,
Remember that to you it seems thus lovely
Because we have believed, and found it so.

—Virginia Brand, '33.

Dogs of Parts

IT was very, very early when Ham awoke that momentous September morning in the year of our Lord 1929. The sun was just peeping over the crest of Betsy Bell mountain as he turned eagerly toward his fellow guardsman.

For eighty-seven years the guarding of Mary Baldwin traditions had rested upon these two. For decades now nothing had happened to ruffle their placid existence.

But today something was in the air. There was flurry and gossip even among the squirrels. They chattered of amazing things—excited with the excitement of apprehension, of uncertainty. "Nuts! Nuts!" said the squirrels.

"Jam, Jam! What are those squirrels flurrying about?"

Jam—slowly emerging from a brown study: Oh, what would they be flurrying about at a time like this? They've heard about it too!

Ham: Well I'm afraid we might as well give up. "Every dog has his day." How can we guard M. B. C.? Everything is turning topsy-turvy. What with a new President, new Dean of Women, and the crowning stroke—that thing called "Student Government"! Where there's "Student Government," there's no place for a dignified old dog like me.

Jam: Oh, I've been thinking. It can't be so bad as all that. Mary Baldwin is Mary Baldwin—she's built on more than soap bubbles. Come on, let's not desert our post.

We shall see what we shall see!

ACT 1—THROUGH THE COLUMNS

(A car had driven up to the front entrance. A girl—an exceedingly new, new girl—climbed out. Ham and Jam settled down in their most dignified and impressive manner to greet her. She was soon followed by others—tall girls, short girls, frightened girls, excited girls, homesick girls. It was easy for Ham and Jam with their experienced eyes to detect which ones in the crowd were Freshmen. While old girls threw themselves wildly into each other's arms, new ones looked on—eagerly, hopefully, doubtfully.)

Through the column the Class of '33 passed—into a new and different life—at first disturbing, complex, incomprehensible. But not for long! It meant initiation for all concerned—President, Dean, Student Government, and Class of '33. Freshmen all!

At last came the great day of October 25th, when the Class of '33 was formally organized. No longer were they merely new girls, for they had a president and officers of their own. And already the class had shown its wisdom by choosing as sponsor Miss Fannie Strauss. With Miss Fannie they had to feel a part of Mary Baldwin. There were get-together teas at her home, plans for action, buggy rides—and with one accord Nancy was proclaimed class mascot.

The Juniors proved a perfect sister class, entertaining the Freshmen royally with a tea on November 4.

The Freshmen, not to be outdone, gave an informal reception for the entire school. Later, full of the Christmas spirit, they decorated the back gallery with wreaths.

The biggest event of the entire year, in the opinion of the Freshmen at least, took place on March 25. For what member of the Class of '33 could forget the banquet given at the Stonewall Jackson Country Club in honor of the Juniors? After breathless preparation and elaborate planning, the banquet proved a great success. With its theme of dreams and ideals it carried out just what the class wished to express of their feeling toward Mary Baldwin.

Thus ended the Freshman year.

Before they knew it September had rolled around once again. This time the Class of '33 passed through the columns—not as frightened novices but as confident homecomers—ready to take a bigger and more active part in the life of M. B. C.

As Sophs they right gladly took upon themselves the Freshman initiation, the grand finale of which was Rat Court. The august jury of the court pronounced the verdict —"Freshmen—good sports, one and all!"

The Sophomores were intensely proud of their sister class, now occupying the high rank of Seniors. And on December 5 they entertained them with a buffet supper at the Country Club.

By the end of this year, Student Government at Mary Baldwin was no longer a fearful and terrible thing. Even Ham and Jam hailed it as an established fact!

As the end of their career as underclassmen drew near, they came to realize more and more the meaning of the much used phrase—"I represent Mary Baldwin." And they looked forward eagerly to the next September when they could represent M. B. C. in a different and larger way.

ACT 2—BEHIND THE COLUMNS

On the morning of September 9, 1931, Ham and Jam greeted joyously their old friends of the Class of '33. They smiled to themselves as the Juniors passed again through the columns, for they knew that surprises awaited them there. What a change in the parlors—for to their old charm was added a new beauty. The much enlarged library, the lounge, the improved chapel were added surprises. Indeed as one illustrious Junior said: "A guide would have been quite in order."

Upperclassmen! It hardly seemed possible. But it was a wonderful feeling. And each member felt a sense of new privilege and responsibility. Now had come the time for carrying their ideals over into reality.

It was with real enthusiasm that the Class of '33 made welcome the Class of '35. They entertained the new Freshmen with a tea in the parlors on October 8. The Junior-Senior banquet, carrying out the Washington bicentennial theme, took place on February 23 at the Stonewall Jackson Hotel.

On March 12 the Freshman Class gave the Juniors one of the most original banquets in history—showing themselves to be very much "in the swim."

The BLUESTOCKING, edited by the Class of '33, with its "Alice in Wonderland" theme, seemed somehow representative of the ideals and dreams which to them were Mary Baldwin.

The year '31-'32 was momentous in the life of M. B. C. For she became a member of the Southern Association of Colleges. And with what jubilation the news was spread! She preserved her uniqueness and individuality while her place was ever broadening, and the Class of '33 grew prouder and prouder of their Alma Mater.

Seniors! The name had always had a fascinating sound and now the Class of '33 could hardly believe it really theirs. But as they again passed behind the columns on the 14th day of September, 1932, Ham and Jam watched them with pride. Into their hands this year must go the major part of the leadership in student activities.

On Miss Baldwin's birthday the Class of '33 was formally invested with the cap and gown—symbols of their authority, privilege, and responsibility.

The Senior Class presentation of Sheridan's "The Rivals" was a huge success, for the members of the cast proved themselves unrivalled rivals.

According to a favorite custom, now a tradition, the Senior Class in partnership with Santa Claus gave a party on the night before Christmas vacation for all the employees—a friendly getting together of all those who serve Mary Baldwin.

The last semester was crowded with interest from beginning to end. The Seniors were practice teaching, challenging the faculty in basketball, being entertained by the Juniors and Sophomores. Almost before they knew it commencement time had come—with Class Day, Senior Vespers, May Day, and finally—that happiest and yet saddest experience—graduation day.

And now it was with unfeigned regret that Ham and Jam saw pass from behind the columns their old and loved friends. What a change in their feelings since that long-ago day in September, 1929! As they went out Ham and Jam had no fear. They knew the Class of '33 would guard and further M. B. C. in giving her to the world beyond the columns.

Ham and Jam smiled that mysterious smile of retrospect—of prophecy.

ACT 3—BEYOND THE COLUMNS

Something was in the air. The squirrels, bushy tails held high, were chattering boastfully of amazing things.

The years had been friendly to Ham and Jam. Yet their coats were more sleek than formerly. Ham was in a dozing reverie—at his years he was entitled to such a privilege.

Jam: Wake up, Ham! You've missed half the gossip already. These squirrels may be disturbing to the peace but they are plenty good newsmongers. (For Ham and Jam, sad to say, had taken up and still clung to that awful slang of the thirties.)

Ham: What's it all about this time?

Ham: Remember the Class of '33 that you thought were going to turn everything at Mary Baldwin topsy-turvy? But Student Government put new life into my old bones. And how that class played their part! And their roles today are making Mary Baldwin's dreams world property. Those roles—how true to type!

Role 1—Home Sweet Home!

Martha Bell—Was that a lovely wedding? And domestic! Why she started when still a Senior by making stuffed giraffes and needlepoint.
June Bowie—Socially prominent modern matron.
Katharine Crockett—Surrounded by her "cheerful cherubs".
Margaret DeMund—Madame of the Malapropian air.
Martha Simmons—Hostess—of the rare old southern charm.

Role 2—Little Red School House—Modern Version.

Mary Buck—Conducts missions on basis of sportsmanship.
Mildred Coleman—Famed model Sunday School class, gaining by leaps and bounds.

Role 3—Rare Old Volumes.

Frances Brown, Frances Tabb, Frances Thomas } Through their innovations as librarians, even college students take incredible delight in rare old volumes.

Role 4—In Black and White.

Jean Higbee—Editor of the International Hourly.
Ruth Hopewell—Her Minuteman.
Gladys Lyles—Manager of the South Sea Island style forecast.
Barbara Smith—Society Editor of same.

Role 5—On the High Seas.

Mildred Keane—With Keane as director, see the world at a glance.
Caroline Rives—Chairman of pep committee for Keane's tour.
Margie King—First aid—when the waves were too much for them.

Role 6—The Clash of World Forces.

Mary Bussells—Prominent executive enforces dry law at Timbuctoo.
Ruth Edmunds—Criminal lawyer prosecutes all violators of Dead Sea Non-fishing Law.
Margaret Grabill—By diplomatic negotiation eradicates age-old strife between dogs and cats.

Lucy Jo Davis, Gloria Jones, Lib Wilson } They Stoop to Conquer! International exam skit goads all to health.

Role 7—The Stars in Their Places.

Lib Louderback—The staged canary.
Betty Buel—The actor Absolute.
Sallie Ruhe—Sir Lucius learns his lines.
Virginia Brand—Promising poetess wins Pulitzer prize.
Louise Randol—Fiddles while cookies burn.
Ruth Frazier—The Wondering Minstrel of Samoa.

Role 8—Excelsior.

Drs. Dudley, Manson, Harris } Through mathematical genius discover the planet—Void.
Jean Brehm—With Brehm as international financier the depression is ended and the long awaited trip gets under way.
Kitty Shankweiler—Kitty, being of a quick and agile composition, was chosen for the trip. She is last remembered by those who knew her best as perched precariously astride a rocket.

Afterthought—{ C. Armstrong, C. Taylor } stalled on a wave!

Conclusion—The squirrels, Ham and Jam—they know. They can't be wrong!

Charlotte Taylor,
Christine Armstrong.

Class Will

WE, the Class of 1933, of Mary Baldwin College, being of sound mind and body, do hereby will and bequeath the following possessions:

1. We do hereby will the respect and deference due Seniors to the Class of 1934.

2. We do hereby express our sincere appreciation to our beloved sister class, the Sophomores, for their loyalty and piscatorial entertainments.

3. With a bow and flourish we bequeath, Nancy, the epitome of equine pulchritude, to all the coming classes as a loyal mascot and sole survivor of the "good old days."

4. We do hereby solemnly will that our athletic jinx be interred in a ten-foot grave.

5. We will with appreciation, the interest and co-operation of our beloved Miss Fannie to all little Freshmen suffering from nostalgia.

Individual Bequests:

Louise Randol leaves her taxis to the struggling practice teachers.

Ruth Frazer bequeaths her pie bald hair to Sadie Roberts.

Elizabeth Louderback, Charlotte Taylor, and Elizabeth Wilson will their basketball ability to Betty Welles.

Emily Jean Higbee and Martha Bell bequeath their success in acquiring diamonds to all struggling aspirants of the same.

Barbara Gleetz Smith leaves her house presidency to Winnie Love.

Frances Thomas wills her decorum to Julia Forsythe.

Misses Manson, Brand, Buck, and Brehm leave their struggles with problem pupils to Dr. Smoke.

Katheryn Shankweiler and Gladys Lyles leave their numerous trips to Lexington to Winnie Goodman.

Nell Dudley leaves her trusty chariot to the Sophomore hockey team.

June Bowie leaves her pie-sitting ability to Kitty Drummond.

Caroline Rives leaves her first trip to Harlem to Marjorie Stuart.

Misses Edmunds, Grabill, Hopewell, Buel, Armstrong, and King leave their dramatic inclinations, as shown in "The Rivals" to the Dramatic Club.

Sara George Harris leaves her mathematical brilliance to next year's struggling Freshmen.

Mildred Coleman leaves her tennis ability to Louisa Heeth.

Mary Bussells wills her dignity to Jane Rice.

Gloria Ileen Vivian Nelson Jones and Lucy Jo Davis leave their individuality behind them.

Misses Tabb and Brown will their loyalty to the College.

Mildred Keane leaves her green shoes to Raquel Fajardo.

Peg DeMund bequeaths her S. M. A. cape to Mary Virginia Clark.

Sallie Zilch Ruhe leaves her smocks to Cornell and Brown.

Martha Simmons leaves her bridge games to Frances Woolford.

Katharine Crockett leaves her Johnny Jones to Dr. Smoke to be used as an illustration in his lectures.

THE JUNIORS

TIME: Midnight in late November

PLACE: The front terrace

CHARACTERS: One brown, shaggy dog; another shaggy, brown dog

AT the opening of the scene all is quiet except for the fluttering and crackle of leaves in the wind. A chime breaks through the stillness—then another and still another until twelve notes have counted themselves out. It is then that the scene resolves itself into action.

Jam (with a bounce): Wake up, papa. Have you ever seen such a gloriously gorgeous night? It's so stupid to have to sit here all day long and act like stone. No one even guesses that you catch on to what's going on—and I do hate not to be able to give even one blink at those awful pews! But the worst was that day they scrubbed us with tooth brushes—every time that freshman touched me she tickled and I nearly sneezed in her face when she massaged my nose. Are you still yawning? Come on, I'll race you to the Senior Bench.

Ham: Wait a minute, junior. How you young things wake up all at once is a mystery to me. Doesn't a good stretch mean a thing to you?

Jam: "Pase un Shose"—as the French table would say. I'll give you ten: One—two—three—Here we go!

Ham (Climbing on the Bench—panting): By the time I've raced you this far I feel as ancient as a senior.

Jam: All right—You be the senior. And I'll be—I'll be—why, you've just told me! I'm a junior. My, but I'm glad mother's name was Jam—that makes me a junior for always, and always and—

Ham: Fine! Then off you go from the Senior bench. Scat!

Jam: Pooh. As if I care. You can't dance and scatter the leaves around like I can while you're sitting up there all dignified and proper. Look, they're red and yellow—my favorite colors. Don't you love them?

Ham: Red and yellow! Those leaves are scarlet and gold, silly. I do wish your mother were here to teach you to be more poetic—especially on a night like this.

Jam: Scarlet and gold? "Colors of '34, scarlet and gold." Then they're my colors because I'm a junior, and I'm a junior because they're my colors. It's all mixed up. Oh, I'm so glad! you know, I've always been just a tiny bit partial to that class and I didn't know why until tonight. I see now—I belong to them. Do you think maybe I could be their mascot? If they would only play hockey after midnight I could jump down and go to the games. Wouldn't it be grand? Maybe they'd give me some candy if I sat up and begged—like this.

Ham (laughing): Grow up, youngster. Don't you know that next year your precious juniors are going to be seniors and they'll be sitting up here with me "all dignified and proper"?

Jam: Oh, I don't give one small rabbit. They've got a year before them—and think of all the things they'll do in it. Why, they've already had a picnic for the freshmen up in the "corner." There's hockey—oh, I forgot, that's over. Well, better luck with basketball—that new banner Mrs. Grafton gave them ought to be a good omen. And then there's baseball and track in the spring—and tennis and golf. And—what else?

Ham: Don't tell me that you're forgetting the main joy of your life, the chief aim of your ——— ———

Jam (beaming): I remember—Banquets! They'll have two of them this year, and one of them will be given for them—the Freshman-Junior Banquet. Of course, they'll give the Seniors one, too, like they did last year. Food and music—and dancing—and ice cream! Won't it be great?

Ham: And you know you can count on their sponsor for a surprise some time during the year.

Jam: That's right. She won't fail them. Good night, you're almost getting enthusiastic. How about a leaf fight?

Ham: Well, I tell you, when you get to be as old——

Jam: Let's sing then

"Colors of '34, scarlet and gold,
Fire us with true ambition,
Let us build

Ham: Shh! Here comes Mr. Rowe. Back to the porch now—one—two—three—

THE SOPHOMORES

THERE lieth an isle, Ye Merrie Baldland, afar from the shores of Knowledge, separated from it by a vast and barren expanse. This islet divideth itself into four realms—Freshnutland, Sophmonia, Junioristki, and Seniorignity. The most precosious of these being the inhabitants of Sophmonia, 'tis with these that we most concern ourselves.

Time: B. V. D. (Before the Violent Depression).

Place: Council Chamber.

Curtain riseth (barring accidents) on the council chamber, where sitteth assembled in deep meditation the council. Anarchy Thetfordice, President, Myra Cornellshchi, Vice-President, Ervy Brownie, Treasurer, Hada Wead, Secretary, and Prime Minister (Matha Mildred Taylorvytski). Deep consternation reigneth.

Soph Moore, a goodly stripling (entering): Hail, wise and venerable sages. Why so pensive, fair ones?

Council (in unison): Well met, noble youth. What cloudeth thy sunny face?

Soph Moore: Forsooth, love is mistress of my heart. No longer pangs of hunger assail my wretched frame. Slumber evadeth me and I toss my fever stricken limbs through the long watches of the dark night. One passion filleth my fiery breast, one passion seeth and rageth within me.

Prime Minister: Methinks she hath quite bowled thee o'er. What name beareth this choice damosel?

Soph Moore: Etta (Big Breakfast), goddess of Success.

Prime Minister: Why dost thou not unite with her in the sacred bonds of matrimony?

Soph Moore: Verily, 'tis my true desire, but the damosel fain would have her fling. Forsooth, the damosel willeth that I prove myself worthy to gain her lily white hand by conquering Count Hockey, a stalwart knight.

A flourish of trumpets—in bursts jester gesticulating wildly. (They called him a wit but they were only half right.) Noble Knights, Defenders of the Faith, Princes, for brevity's sake, Gentlemen: Pray, pardon the intrusion, but it just so happeneth that a most phenomenal horde hath swept into this island. Green of countenance, they hail from Freshnutland—of a truth, barbarians.

Soph Moore: O, come they in anger, or come they in peace?

Jester: Neither come they in anger nor come they in peace, but to gaze at the wonders of a civilized land. Cans't ride against them, noble knights?

Soph Moore (aside): O, Etta, lend me noble courage that I may win. (To the Jester): Bring forth the horse.

(The horse was brought, in truth he was a noble steed.)

End of 1st Scene (Patience, gentle reader).

SCENE II

Etta, gorging away in banquet hall. Enter Soph Moore.

Soph Moore: What meaneth this? Art yet stuffing?

Etta: Thou art jealous of a lady's pleasure, my lord.

Soph Moore: Behold, I have fetched to you this day two crude specimens of humanity.

(Flourish of trumpets) Enter Freshmen, clad in raincoats, galoshes, carrying umbrellas and fishbowls with gold fish, and gazing wild-eyed in sheer desperation.

Etta: Prithee, why looseth thou wild beast in the palace?

Soph: Shrink not, fair lady, mayhap with the mellowing of time they will improve. Their strange apparel is but the insignia of their seriutude to Sophmonia. 'Twas but an easy task to conquer them, coulds't have done it single handed. They are thine, forget not their ignorance of the world, but treat them as it pleaseth thee. Gentle be, but firm.

Curtain falls. (Never depend on curtains.)

SCENE III

Upper back gallery of palace. Enter Soph, arrayed in gym suit, bearing on his lofty brow, a silver trophy, at once a loving cup and helmet, awarded to him for the erectness of his stature and its renoune through all Merrie Baldland.

Enter Count Hockey clad in his famous tunic and rubberritz (archaic for shin guards).

Merrie Baldland holdeth the ancient tradition, less mishap should befall one, that duels shall be fought with hockey sticks. Thus it was that Soph Moore and Count Hockey engaged.

A flourish of trumpets. The fray is on. The struggle waxeth warm. (Picture it to suit yourself.) A few fierce hacks, and Soph emerges triumphant.

Soph: The glory is all for Etta and Sophmonia. Forsooth, it was a gallant fight.

End of scene three.

SCENE IV

On a lofty cliff standeth Soph, Cabinet, Prime Minister, and Etta, munching away on an apple. From afar on the briny deep there appeareth a tiny speck.

Soph: A light! A sail! A ship!

Brownie: I beg your Royal Highness' pardon, it alighteth from the ship.

Etta (Squealing): Lord, it hath a fiendish look.

Soph: Methinks, I discern three heads.

Cornellshchi: Mayhap we best disperse. The critter approacheth nigh.

Soph: His three brows bear names German, Latin, and Spanish. Methinks those words have a familiar ring.

Wead: Right well do I recall that if one head be severed from his gruesome bulk forthwith two more will grow.

Etta: Behold the cycloptic eye of Psychology.

Thetfordice: In truth he beareth the name Cursed Courses and cometh from Isle of Learning. Hast, Soph, o'er come this foul monster lest he become thy master.

Soph: He pauseth a league away yet am I able to feel his hot breath upon my cheek. I tremble to combat with him.

Etta: Fear not, brave lad. Victory will be thine. Go forth.

And now ensueth one of the worlds worst battles. Victory hangeth in the balance. Night descendeth. At last by much cramming and burning of midnight oil Soph lurcheth forth victorious.

End of scene four.

SCENE V

(Rejoice, gentle Reader, 'tis the last.)

At palace: Banquet hall. 'Tis the wedding feast—a sumptious spread, Matha Mildred Taylorvitski giveth this feast. Soph and Success (Etta) are happily married at last. Usual endless chatter and routine: goeth, grabbeth, gobbleth, and gitteth. Our wretched attempt at comical, tragical, historical, ironical, romantical, hysterical, drama has miserably failed. As you, as we—— 'twas forced upon us, let us make an end of this farce. Farewell!

A ONE-ACT HISTORY OF THE FRESHMAN CLASS

TIME: Summer of 1933

SETTING: Any Mary Baldwin Freshman's Home

SCENE I

LIVING room with freshman curled upon a couch reading a book.

Freshman (throwing book aside and speaking aloud): Heavens! I never was so tired of doing nothing. I've read everything from The House at Pooh Corner to my brother's psychology books. I've done everything there is possible to do around here, and I still have weeks and weeks left. What is there to do? I almost wish I was back at Mary Baldwin. Gosh! I had some swell times there———.

(Girl wearing late summer clothes enters, she looks frightened to death, and clutches a card that seems to be her only support. She walks uncertainly around and then goes out.)

Freshman has never stopped talking—

Those first few weeks were really funny. We were all so scared about nothing and we were absolutely helpless. I suppose every freshman makes mistakes, but that time one of the girls thought Dean Pfohl was a freshman too was certainly funny. I declare I didn't know one freshman from another myself. I wonder if Imogen Bird is anxious to get back as I. She made a peach of a president. Just think, will be high and mighty sophomores next year———.

(Group of girls enter wearing slickers backwards, overshoes, and carry an umbrella and a bowl of gold fish.)

Continues: And will we fix those freshmen. I only wish we could get the juniors back. Maybe we can beat them in hockey or basketball. Wouldn't that be wonderful?———

(Group of girls enter, each dressed to represent a sport. All practice a bit then walk off.)

Continues: We certainly did trounce the seniors in basketball and I see no reason why we shouldn't beat the others. Of course it means lots of training. Well. I must say that I did have a grand time at the athletic banquet to make up for the games we lost. We did have more nice dinners———.

(Several girls wearing evening clothes, hurry across stage, all are putting finishing touches to their costumes and make-up.)

Continues: And didn't those Juniors get the surprise of their lives when they saw the dinner we gave them. I felt so proud and I know every Freshman felt as though the dinner was given by her. Yet I do believe every one was feeling pretty sad about leaving. When I went to Mary Baldwin I laughed and said, "None will ever see me cry when I leave this place." I did cry and so did a lot of others.

(Girls carrying luggage and wet handkerchiefs stumble across the stage—it is very evident that they hate to break up those new friendships, even for the summer months.)

Continues: I wonder who all will be back there next year. Every single one of them I hope. Then we'll have our first Sophomore Class meeting and instead of being strangers will all know each other and it won't be any trouble to pick out our class officers. Let's see, besides Imogen, Julia Forsythe was treasurer, Jean Hebbard was Secretary, and Ora Ehmling was vice-president.

(Door bangs somewhere in the house. Freshman jumps to her feet with a start.)

Good Gracious! Wonder if any one heard me blabbing away to myself? It's so nice to think how much I had to do last winter, longing all the time for a vacation, now I have one that is driving me crazy. Oh hum! Let me see, where was I reading?

Finds her place and begins reading again but as the curtain begins to fall she looks off into space and hums the Mary Baldwin Alma Mater.

You'll Remember

The lazy blue of the mounts,
A breath from the pine moon sent,
The easy swing of a saddle,
That brought you a realm of content,
Broad boughs for a roof above you
As you slept with the starry skies,
The things that your heart will tell you
Makes the life that satisfies.

And day by day as you listen
Something within you will speak,
That tug at your heartstrings will tighten
Till at last you would go and seek
Far back in the hazy distance,
Along the trail that you trod of yore
For that voice that's always calling,
Come back to your own once more.

—Barbara Sattes.

Enter: Princess Spring

King winter is banished away with a frown,
For the new Princess Spring comes into renown.
Old Earth brighter grows at her earliest look
Even babbles the voice of the tiniest brook.

The world blossoms forth in her gayest debut,
And each green thing growing starts out life anew.
There's joy and content in the smallest of things
When gaily trips forth the beautiful Spring.

Each flower sends forth a gallant array
So perfectly timed as to greet the first day
Each bird on the nest or high on the wing
Were those among first, the message to bring.

Each creature bends down in reverence low
To Him from whom all blessings flow
For who else could send the fair maiden, Spring:
Life about whom many poets doth sing.

Peter Pan played with a goodly cause
And the woodland danced with never a pause,
Centered about the newly crowned Spring
Till all of the forest with music did ring.

Then when the twilight her curtain let fall
Quiet and solitude closed over all.
Sleep overtook the folk of the wood,
And they slumbered on thinking life was good.

A Message from the Student President

FOUR years have seen great changes in Mary Baldwin. When this year's present senior class entered Mary Baldwin it found what could hardly be called a full-fledged college, for it was just emerging from its preparatory school ways, but it leaves today a real college. During the four years spent here, we have watched changes which came about so quietly sometimes that we hardly knew there was a change until it had taken place. These changes, however, marked a great step forward.

I think probably the greatest factor in making Mary Baldwin what it is today has been Student Government. Wherever you find community life you find government. Here it used to be a system of supervision by the faculty, but four years ago a Student President, at the head of a Council, took charge of the government of the Student Body. That year, one in which startling innovations took place, was one on which a great deal depended: students were taught responsibility to their association and to themselves. It had to make the way for all which was to come. It met with unusual success and I think that on the whole success has certainly followed it. Today at Mary Baldwin Student Government is still in effect and plays a very important part in the life of those in the College. In connection with it everyone has a very definite part to play. It is for every girl in the College and stands for an ideal to which each girl contributes.

We hope that the ideal set up this year will be lasting.

Hockey

THE past hockey season proved to be of a great interest to a large number. Many of the Freshmen, new to the game, organized themselves, and after much hard work came through with a splendid team.

The Senior-Freshman game was a thrilling one. The Seniors had set their hearts on winning their last hockey game at Mary Baldwin, and the Freshmen were equally determined to be the victors. The final score was 2-1 in favor of the Seniors.

The game anticipated with the keenest interest was that between the Sophomores and Juniors. The teams appeared so evenly matched that no one dared say who might be the possible victors. When the day came for the show down, many cheering enthusiasts appeared on the sidelines. The game was a thrilling one, but the Sophomores from the very beginning proved to have the superior team work. The final score was in favor of the Sophomores making them the champions of the year.

Every one enjoyed hockey season immensely and splendid spirit was shown at all the games.

Varsity Hockey

Each year a varsity hockey team is chosen by the Athletic Council. This team is made up of the eleven players who have shown the best sportsmanship and most distinctive playing on the field. The varsity team is as follows:

Elizabeth Wilson	Left Wing
Frances Woolford	Left Inside
Betty Welles	Center Forward
Martha Bell	Right Inside
Mary Cornell	Right Wing
Isabella Spillman	Left Halfback
Anne Holman	Center Halfback
Jacqueline Crinkley	Right Halfback
Mary Buck	Left Fullback
Winnie Love	Right Fullback
Ann Budd Patton	Goal

This year the third annual Virginia College Hockey Tournament was held at Sweet Briar College. Many of the girls interested in hockey attended this tournament, and showed keen interest in the technique and playing of this classical game.

Basketball

TRADITION demands that Mary Baldwin girls be good sports. In the realm of basketball they are better than good.

Of course it takes them fully a month of hard training to get in full swing. The practices held at night at the "Y" were unusually well attended this year. The Freshmen overshadowed all other classes with their numerous applicants for berths on the team. But the Sophomores and Juniors had almost their entire squads of the previous year ready for battle. Keen competition between the latter classes made interest run high in their ranks. The Seniors, despite their traditional dignity, showed up with plenty of vim, vigor, and vitality. The fight was on!

In the first games sister classes fought in the usual sisterly manner with the Juniors emerging as victors over the Frosh, 46-6, and with the Sophomores claiming the laurels for defeating the Seniors, 43-7.

The next group of games saw the Sophomores pitting their strength against the Freshman team and piling up a winning score of 55 against the Freshmen's 7. At this time the Juniors displayed their skill by conquering the hard-fighting Seniors, 33-10.

The final games of tourney drew a large and intensely interested crowd, all anxiously cheering their favorites. Freshmen met Seniors and proceeded to deliver a hard, fast game which the upper classmen found impossible to stop no matter how hard they tried. When the last whistle blew, the score stood 17-10 in favor of the Freshmen.

Last of all came the championship game between the Sophomores and Juniors. Each team was determined to bring home the spoils. Pretty foot work and alert passing made the game especially exciting. The forwards of both teams hit the basket consistently. The most crucial area in the game was the center. However, during the last half of the game, the ball was mostly in Sophomore territory, but due to the excellent guarding of the Juniors, no spectacular gains were made by their opponents. The final score, 22-15, gave the championship to the Sophomores.

But the most memorable features of all the games were Crinkley's red hat, Betty Welles' inability to stand up, Spillman's aerial tackles, Woolford's Indian head-band, Liz Wilson's long shot, Annie Belle Bradley's substitutions, and everybody's fun.

Basketball

Another varsity chosen by the Athletic Council is the basketball team. This team is made up of six players who have shown sportsmanship and good playing during the season. The team is made up of:

Mary Cornell	Right Forward
Grace Crowe	Center
Anne Holman	Side Center
Isabella Spillman	Right Guard
Frances Woolford	Left Guard

The different varsities are kept secret until the Athletic Banquet when they are announced and the members are given a small token of acknowledgment.

Baseball

IN the spring when Mary Baldwin turns to outdoor sports, then the girls start for Athletic Field with baseball and bat. This major sport begins in April and lasts until the second week in May. The first week is spent in learning the game, the second week is turned over to selecting individual positions, the third and fourth weeks to practice games and the final week to the inter-class games. Then on Field Day, which is the climax of the baseball season, the championship game is played. This is always the game of games. Often it means more than winning the silver championship cup, for sometimes it is the game that determines which class will receive the cup offered for the most points during the year.

During the entire baseball season each girl plays her best, for of course she wants to make the varsity team, which is made up of the nine best players of the college, and receive the individual award.

All of the girls participate in baseball. To the freshmen, sophomores and juniors it is the last sport of the year in which to have a part and to the seniors it is the last sport of their college days, therefore Mary Baldwin has one hundred per cent attendance at the Athletic Field during baseball season.

Track

WHAT! Ho! It's spring and not least of all do you see Mary Baldwin girls footing their way to the Athletic Field to jump (especially Oscar), hurdle, throw javelins and baseball, sprint and what-not. Everyone is practicing for Field Day, the final tourney of the Athletic Year. Class teams and "lone individuals" compete for first place and are not unknown to near the mark of state and national records.

Track is not without mention at the Athletic Banquet, held soon after Field Day. Each year six girls are chosen according to ability to be on the Track Varsity.

One does not have to keep training to go out for track and this is probably one of the reasons for its great popularity: for which popularity it strives hard because of the fact that baseball is its noble competitor during the same season.

Athletic Council Activities

THE Athletic Association sponsors an athletic and recreational program throughout the year for the entire student body.

On the second Saturday after college opens, a picnic is given at the farm. This affords an excellent opportunity for the old and new girls to get acquainted while roasting weenies or singing around the camp fires.

During examination week the council stresses various sports which will help the girls to keep physically and mentally fit. At the student chapel Gloria Jones and Lucy Jo Davis present their masterpiece, a play contrasting the girl who crammed and flunked her exams with the one who exercised regularly, kept a clear mind, and passed. Several new sports were added during this week. Ping Pong became the craze of the school with driving on the indoor golf range, running at a close second. Other popular sports were bowling, deck tennis, riding, and swimming.

Health Day is always a big event. The day begins with an original skit put on in chapel by members of the hygiene class. There, one hears catchy health songs which are excellent reminders of the importance of good posture, proper sleep, exercise, and a balanced diet. These points are further emphasized by posters lining both sides of the back gallery. Katherine Hood won the prize for the best poster. At night there was a posture parade with every club and organization represented. This year Marian Martin won the silver loving cup awarded for the best posture.

In the spring the annual horse show, held at the Fair Grounds, always arouses much enthusiasm. Any student who has had experience in riding is eligible. The main events are:

1. Beginners—Three-gaited class.
2. Advanced—Three-gaited class.
3. Five-gaited class—Open.
4. Good horsemanship—Open.
5. Jumping class—Open.
6. Tournament.

At the end of the show the Glenmore Hunt Club of Staunton stages a regular hunt around the Fair Grounds.

The Athletic Banquet is the climax of the Associations' activities. It is held in the college dining room just before school closes. At this time all varsity teams are announced and awards are distributed to the class teams in hockey, basketball, baseball, and track. Silver loving cups are awarded to the class having the highest number of points and to the winners of the golf and tennis tournaments. All girls who have made 650 points within the year are given college monograms. Then the most coveted award of all is given. It is a Mary Baldwin Seal Blazer which is given to the girl chosen by popular vote as the best sport in the college. The new Athletic Council is installed, and Dr. Jarman talks on some phase of athletics. The banquet closes with all singing the Alma Mater.

On Choosing a College

Are you going to college?

Do you belong to the present generation?

The answer to the preceding interrogations is perforce the same.

Today the question is not—Are you going to college? but—Which college have you chosen?

Choose your college with care. Be sure she will provide for you four years of happiness and intellectual satisfaction.

Read her catalogue, look at her view book, but study her year book. Nowhere else will you see mirrored as distinctly her living personality.

There you will meet face to face the students who call themselves by her name.

Mary Baldwin College is particularly happy in being introduced to you by her year book, THE BLUESTOCKING.

PLAY SAFE AND BE SATISFIED

The garments you value are worth insurance against incorrect methods of cleaning. The National Association of Dyers and Cleaners, together with the Federal Trade Commission, has set certain standards of quality and handling that protect you—the customer.

These methods have been whole-heartedly endorsed by WOODWARD'S, and every rule is a standard practice in OUR plant. We believe they reflect a desire to meet the responsibility you EXPECT of your cleaner. Your problems are OUR problems.
